

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Methods and systems for forming and testing hypotheses regarding improving the correspondence between information needs and data retrieved in response to those needs. In a preferred embodiment, user feedback regarding relevancy of retrieved data is used in combination with the technique of latent semantic indexing to independently facilitate both hypothesis formation and testing.